Just over four months after her return from Libya, HMCS Charlottetown is Mediterranean-bound.

Sailors gave a tearful goodbye to hundreds of loved ones at the Halifax navy dockyard on Sunday morning before departing on a six-month deployment to the Mediterranean Sea.

There, the ship will participate in the NATO-led Operation Active Endeavour, tasked with finding and boarding ships suspected of participating in terrorism.

"We'll join NATO, and we'll be part of a counter-terrorism mission, which effectively means we're going to be patrolling the Mediterranean, looking for weapons of mass destruction or constituents that could be used to design such things," said Charlottetown Cmdr. Wade Carter, who will have a crew of about 250 sailors.

Defence Minister Peter MacKay announced the mission in November, committing the Royal Canadian Navy to remain a presence in the Mediterranean until the end of 2012.

MacKay said the decision was partly out of consideration of the situation in Syria, where the government has been brutally cracking down on protesters.

But Carter said that's not part of the ship's mission — at least for now.

"We are ready to deploy on behalf of the Government of Canada if they direct us to proceed on any type of mission," he said.

Carter said he doesn't anticipate a high level of risk, with most ships in the region complying with the law and allowing inspection.

But Cpl. Chuck Collier-O'Connell is still anxious.

"Nervous. That's pretty much the only way to explain it," he said on Sunday.

This will be Collier-O'Connell's first deployment. His wife, Jackie, and their sons A.J. and Jeffery, were on the dock to see him off.

Putting cash into commuter rail?

For decades, commuter rail in HRM was only a discussion or a dream, but on Tuesday council will for the first time be asked to put some real money into it.

The transportation committee is recommending council pay for a consultant to prepare a feasibility analysis on commuter rail from Windsor Junction and Enfield to downtown Halifax.

It would cost about $250,000 for the study — including compensation to CN for their participation.

And since CN owns the rail lines, their co-operation is crucial. But it might be a little tricky considering CN and HRM are currently in a court battle over cost-sharing for renovations to train bridges.

"I hope it becomes leverage," said Bedford Coun. Tim Outhit. "Is there an opportunity for us to work together here in a big picture?"

Bedford residents would have much to gain by this proposed commuter-rail system, but HRM is not about to run a railroad, Outhit said. Rather, it would be outsourced to VIA or CN.

"Let's get the facts instead of talking about it for 20 years," he said. "Let's make a decision: Is this going to shape our transportation strategy in the next 20 years or not?"

Back in February 2011, council had a look at a staff report suggesting HRM could make use out of existing rail lines and rebuilt Budd RDC trains or dayliners.

The refurbished dayliners would cost about a "bus and a half," Outhit said.

When the transportation committee discussed the issue in November, they expressed concerns over delays and the deterioration of the rail lines, according to a staff report.

Coun. Dawn Sloane says municipal staff pushed through the sale of St. Patrick's-Alexandra School.

Speaking at a rally to overturn the sale on Sunday, the councillor for downtown Halifax said Halifax regional council didn't follow municipal policy in awarding the site to Jono Developments Ltd.

When asked in an interview afterwards who pushed the sale forward, Sloane simply responded "staff."

"Again, we had this problem with the sewage-treatment plant, where they didn't want to hear from my community," she said. "They're doing it again with this."

Sloane said policy required municipal staff to embark on a 90-day community consultation before selling the property.

"Myself and Jennifer Watts at (Peninsula) Community Council in April of last year ... (asked for what was going to be started when this school came up for sale, and we never did get a reply from staff," she said.

Still, she said it wasn't a fair question to ask whether or not she wants the decision overturned.

"I didn't say no and I didn't say yes. I want answers first."

Some answers may come Tuesday, when opponents of the sale plan to visit city hall.

Rev. Rhonda Britton, who has led the charge demanding council revisit the decision, said the community doesn't oppose "development" as such.

"They made a misstep in the process, and they need to redo this," Britton said Sunday.

Without A trace

► The former Twin Elms Motel on Inglis Street is seen in this photo taken last week. Former Newfoundland Jaime Morey Wyatt was last seen at the motel on Nov. 16, 1996. Police suspect foul play in his subsequent disappearance.

The last reported sighting of Jaime Morey Wyatt was at a now-defunct Halifax motel, where he told staff he was expecting someone to pick him up for a dinner party.

More than 15 years later, Wyatt's family in St. John's has no more answers to his disappearance than that vague detail.

"I would certainly like to know what happened to him, but I don't think that is ever going to be the case," said his younger sister, Barbara Slattery.

"Fifteen years is a long time. I think the (police) in Nova Scotia did what they could and what else is there to do?"

Wyatt's disappearance is among more than 60 unsolved cases in a reward program targeted at major unsolved crimes and administered by the Nova Scotia Department of Justice.

He is still listed as a missing person in the logs of Halifax Regional Police.

But to his family he is a beloved, fun-loving brother and uncle, and the loss has brought about anguish and unending mystery.

Wyatt was staying at the Twin Elms Motel on Inglis Street in Halifax's south end, and was last seen Nov. 16, 1996. According to Halifax Regional Police, the circumstances of his disappearance are suspicious and foul play may be involved.

Single and 62 when he disappeared, Wyatt had worked all over the world offshore, mostly on supply vessels; then he settled into working on vessels sailing in and out of St. John's and Halifax.

He retained an apartment in St. John's. When crew changes took place in Halifax, he would often stay at the Twin Elms, a stately old home that had been converted into a bed and breakfast.

Slattery said Wyatt kept in regular touch with his family, but the last time any of them saw him was Thanksgiving 1996, when Wyatt — who always left his car in St. John's — travelled to Truro to visit a nephew living there. Afterwards, he got on a bus bound for Halifax.

"He kept in touch with me always," said Slattery, fighting tears during an interview.

"It didn't matter if he was on the Panama Canal or wherever he was — he kept in touch."

and saw Slattery's phone number. Slattery found it odd they took so long to call, but that's when she learned of Wyatt's last known whereabouts — he told staff he was going out that night in November 1996.

All Wyatt's seagoing papers, his passport and wallet were left in his room.

For several years after his disappearance, Slattery would frequently get calls from Halifax police, but they haven't been in touch in recent years. The calls would come for clarification when unidentified male remains were found, even if they didn't fit the slightly built Wyatt's description.

"The minute they would say, 'This is Const. so-and-so,' your heart would come up in your throat," she said.

Other than that reported last day at the Twin Elms — which is now an apartment building with different owners — Wyatt's family

'Things can change'

► Halifax Regional Police spokesman Const. Brian Palmeter told The Telegram by email the Wyatt case is still open, is routinely reviewed and any new leads are investigated.

► Though Wyatt is officially listed as missing, police have said they believe he may have been murdered.

► "Things can change and people who have information can make a decision even after a long period of time to come forward," Palmer said.

"I think they followed up on leads and stuff, but they had nothing, no idea. If it didn't happen to me, I'd say, 'That's nonsense. It couldn't possibly happen.' But it does happen — to vanish without a trace is so strange," she said.

Witnesses mum on murder: Cops

► Teen was stabbed at a party last year in Dartmouth

Police say there are people who know what happened in the murder of a 19-year-old Dartmouth woman last January but are refusing to come forward.

Keya Simon was stabbed to death on Jan. 8, 2011, in the early morning hours.

"There were a number of people present when she was killed and those people haven't come forward with the information they have," said Halifax Regional Police spokesman Const. Brian Palmer. "We believe there are people who know exactly what happened."

The 19-year-old was at a party at her sister's apartment on Pinecrest Drive in Dartmouth when a group of people known to them arrived. An altercation ensued, spilling out onto the apartment lawn, with Simon and her 32-year-old sister both stabbed.

Simon was pronounced dead at the scene. Her sister was treated for non-life-threatening injuries.

'They killed my baby': Mom of man beaten in Grenada

► More details emerge about Oscar Bartholomew's death at Grenada police station ► Family, friends prepare for his funeral on Monday

In the end, it may be that one of Oscar Bartholomew's trademark bear hugs sparked the tragic chain of events that led to his beating death in a police station in St. David's, Grenada.

While much remains to come out about what happened, the Canadian Press, based on several interviews, has pieced together an account of what some say led to the death of the visitor from Canada.

"They beat my child to death," Andrianne Bartholomew, his grieving mother, said Saturday. "They killed my baby, my last baby. They killed him."

Bartholomew, 39, a native Grenadian who lived in Toronto, and his wife of 10 years, Dolette Cyr Bartholomew, of Cascapedia-St. Jules, Que., were visiting over the holidays. While driving on Boxing Day, Cyr Bartholomew needed to use a washroom, and the couple stopped at the St. David's police station, where she went inside to use the facilities.

Thinking he recognized a uniformed policewoman as a friend, Bartholomew got out of his car and grabbed her from behind in an exuberant embrace, witnesses said.

"He was always loving to his people," his mother, 71, said of the youngest of her four children. "Whenever he met his people, he always hugged them and give them a cheer."

Some said the officer yelled out she was being raped. Defence lawyer Anslem Clouden, who represents one of the accused officers, said the officer "cried out for help."

At that point, a colleague in a parked police car came to her assistance. A second officer soon came running from the station to help.

Police say Bartholomew tried to kick the officers and resisted them. "Temper flared on all sides," Clouden said.

Three other officers joined the fray and held him down as they struggled to handcuff him. A senior officer ordered a junior to use his belt to tie Bartholomew's feet together because he was kicking out, the lawyer said, citing witness statements.

Within minutes, Bartholomew was in a coma and lay dying.

Cyr Bartholomew, who did not see much of what happened to her husband, refused to discuss the matter Saturday as she prepared for his funeral, to be held Monday.

"It's a very bad time," she said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada Day party to commemorate War of 1812: Documents

The federal government has hired a consultant to inject a little war into this year's Canada Day bash on Parliament Hill.

Paul Shaw, a Toronto theatre producer, has been asked to find ways to insert a War of 1812 theme into the festivities that typically include pop music, dance and fireworks.

"I do big-ass special events all the time, so they asked me to do that," Shaw said. "It's sort of tricky to do a War of 1812 theme when you've got so many modern things in and around it."

The Conservatives, who have been promoting Canada's military heritage, have earmarked money throughout the year to note the bicentennial of the War of 1812 in North America.

The Canadian Heritage Department normally injects patriotic themes into the Canada Day noontime show on Parliament Hill, giving the National Capital Commission a free hand to organize the evening show.

But a recently posted tender document shows that the war theme will appear in both shows. "In 2012, the Government of Canada is commemorating the War of 1812 and this theme must be incorporated in both the noon and evening shows," it says. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nigerian lawmakers on Sunday turned against the president's decision to end government fuel subsidies that kept gasoline prices low, just ahead of a planned labour strike that could paralyze Africa's most populous nation.

In an emergency session, Nigeria's House of Representatives shouted down supporters of President Goodluck Jonathan as they voted for a resolution calling on him to restore subsidies. But their moves went unnoticed by unions preparing for a nationwide strike set to begin Monday, despite a court order against it.

SCREW THE VIEW? MAYBE STOP SCREWING THE TAXPAYERS

URBAN COMPASS

STEPHEN KIMBER
METRO HALIFAX

On Wednesday, local radio personality Bobby Mac launched a new Facebook group "for those of us who are tired of those whining people who don't want any progress in this great city of Halifax." Its name? SCREW THE VIEW.

By Sunday morning, STV had 164 members.

"We are tired of the groups that stop progress in this great city of Halifax," he explained. "We want new buildings. No one goes up Citadel Hill for the view. They go for the fort, and for sex at night."

Accepting Bobby Mac's dubious proposition that no one goes there for the view, let's analyze his most serious argument: Whining, save-the-view-of-the-harbour-floatables crazies are preventing "progress" — by which I assume he means a forest of highrise office towers on the slopes of the Citadel.

Really?

Last year, Dalhousie University's Planning and Design Centre released a map showing 23 major downtown development projects, all of them approved, but almost none built or under construction.

"Last year, Dalhousie University's Planning and Design Centre released a map showing 23 major downtown development projects, all of them approved, but almost none built or under construction."

whiners — who also raised economics 101 questions about the convention centre — appear to have been right about that.

Consider this from the Dec. 31 Wall Street Journal, hardly a preserve of loony preservationists. There's "a nationwide surplus of empty meeting facilities, struggling convention halls and vacant hotel rooms," it notes. "How have governments responded to this glut? By building more convention centers, of course, financed by debt backed by new taxes and fees on already struggling taxpayers."

Uh... perhaps Bobby Mac's next Facebook group will be to whinge about how all our tax dollars are being wasted on a white elephant.

Now that would be progress.

Indo-Canadian centre about to plant its seed

NEWS WORTH SHARING

Media will always have to report on the tough stuff. But we know that Canada is full of compassionate individuals, inspiring projects and stories worth celebrating. Here's just one.

A new and very dynamic place is about to take root in Halifax.

The non-profit Indo-Canadian Community Centre Society is hosting a lottery to raise funds for the construction of a brand-new community centre for the Indo-Canadians in Halifax. Land has already been purchased on Chain Lake Drive and preparations are underway. There are roughly 3,000 Indo-Canadians living in the region, but the centre will undoubtedly serve many more people who may not have Indian roots but still take an interest in the culture's traditions, languages and food. "Not only Indians, but Canadians and other people (support) it," said Dr. Dinesh Sinha, a past president of the Community Centre Society. Plans for the centre already include lessons on Indian languages taught by retired teachers, cooking classes and programs for seniors. The centre would also play host to the annual India Fest, which experienced a very successful inaugural year this year. Buy a lottery ticket by e-mailing madhusinha@mail.com.

Since her 2002 breakout performance in Bend it Like Beckham, Keira Knightley has starred in 18 films, but it was only recently she realized something about her acting process.

"I suffer very badly from stage fright," she says.

"I didn't find it out until I had actually been on stage that that's what the feeling was."

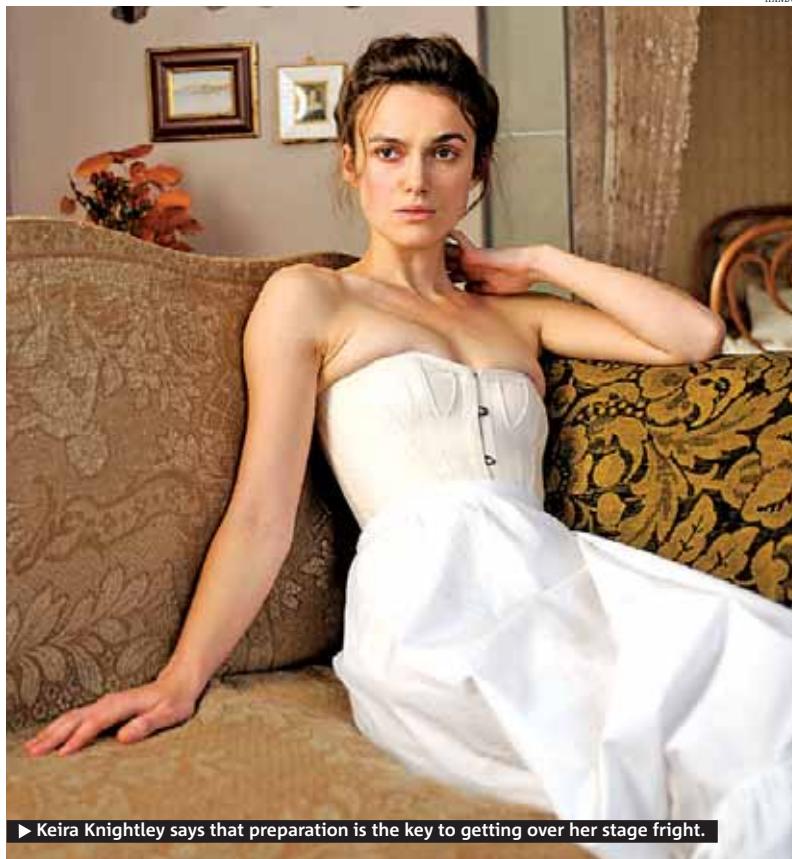

"It's literally like having a wall in front of you. You know you have the ability to break through but for some reason you can't on that day."

"It's very strange that you can work as much as I do and still have a problem with that."

She has found a way to circumvent her fears, a method that came in handy while making her newest film A Dangerous Method, the story of the fathers of psychoanalysis, Carl Jung (played by Michael Fassbender) and Sigmund Freud (played by Viggo Mortensen), and Sabina Spielrein, the intelligent but troubled patient who causes a falling out between the men.

"I found only in the last few years that research helps," she says.

To play Spielrein, a woman wracked by tics and repression, Knightley threw herself into the exploration of the character.

"There was nothing that linked me to her," she says.

"I had no idea about it. So I phoned Christopher Hampton because he did the adaptation of Atonement, which I did a few years ago, and said, 'I'm going to do this, so help. Just help.'

"I went round to his house and thought he was

THE WORD

DOROTHY ROBINSON
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Beyoncé Knowles and Jay-Z reportedly welcomed their daughter over the weekend, according to E! News.

The baby, named Blue Ivy Carter (although some outlets are saying her name is Ivy Blue Carter), was delivered on a private floor of New York's Lenox Hill Hospital that the superstar couple had reportedly paid $1.3 million to rent out.

And while mom and baby recuperate, security is remaining high: Hospital workers have reportedly put tape over surveillance cameras, and employees' mobile phones are being confiscated when they arrive for shifts, sources tell the New York Daily News.

There had to have been a musical motive to naming the child Blue (rhymes with "Boo"?).

While it's not likely the name was inspired by albums by Joni Mitchell or Weezer, we think that every time the girl does a cute drawing they can call it The Blueprint and The Blueprint II after her dad's landmark albums.

Plus, it would have been too weird to name the girl Hova-ette.

Twins take over

More U.S. women are having twins these days. Health officials say one in every 30 babies is a twin. In 1980, only one in 53 newborns was a twin. Experts attribute the jump mainly to medical treatments and procedures that help infertile couples. But they note that there are more older moms today. For some reason, women in their late 30s have twins at a higher rate.

Get your kids moving in 2012

► Turn off the television and get outside!

► Stephanie Joanne, trainer of the Degrassi cast, shows how to get your child moving ► 'Think of exercise for kids as simply moving their bodies', she says

LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

As a kid, you played Capture the Flag. Kids today are playing Call of Duty. The premise of each game is similar. The difference: One is done outdoors, and involves running and jumping...and fake shooting...while the other requires a couch. And maybe a sugary soda, as an accessory.

It's an old story: kids don't get enough physical activity. What's scary is the new research that proves it: Here in Canada, for example (a country with a lot of outdoors), only nine per cent of boys and four per cent of girls meet the new Canadian Physical Activity Guidelines, which state that children and youth should accumulate at least 60 minutes of moderate to vigorous intensity physical activity daily.

The impact of this trend is both immediate (the rise of childhood obesity and diabetes is alarming) and lifelong (lifestyle patterns start young and inactive kids generally turn into inactive adults).

So how can you get your kids off the couch this New Year? "Exercise for kids doesn't mean hitting the treadmill," explains Stephanie Joanne, who is currently training the cast of the hit high school series Degrassi, including stars Jessica Tyler and Raymond Ablack. Simply running around playing hide-and-seek or kicking around a ball shouldn't be viewed as frivolous.

Simple daily physical activity like this improves stamina, agility, strength and coordination in kids.

"Think of exercise for kids as simply moving their bodies. Let them decide how they want to be physically active. Maybe it's throwing a Frisbee, joining a sports team, joining a dance class or simply jumping on a trampoline."

Joanne, also an Extreme Fitness personal trainer, recommends exposing children to as many different forms of activity as possible. "This way, they can choose which ones they enjoy," she says. One easy way to get kids moving around is through dance.

"It's much more effective to tell kids to dance to their favourite songs than to ask them to stay on cardio equipment," she says, adding, "If they don't like dancing, they can skip to their favourite songs."

And if your little ones are technology obsessed, replace Call of Duty with games that require users to get up and move around.

STEPHANIE

EXTREME FITNESS
PERSONAL TRAINER

1 Lead by example.
Be a positive role model. Don't expect your kids to do something you're not doing. Find activities you can enjoy together and commit to fitness for your family.

2 Create active habits.

Walk with your kids to school, do active chores together or get active by volunteering. Create routines early on that require your kids to be active. When it becomes normal to not move and just sit in front of the TV, it becomes harder to break those habits later on.

3 Get a dog.

A family dog is a great way to guarantee some activity in the home. The dog must be walked and it holds kids accountable to making the daily commitment to getting out and walking.

THE NATURAL PIT STICK ROUTE

Is there such a thing as natural deodorant that doesn't contain carcinogens and isn't too expensive? I really can't afford a $17 deodorant. Mansour of Toronto

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

 Yes. There are safer products that don't contain ingredients linked to the "C" word.

Be prepared for a steeper price tag. Eco-friendly deodorants will run you about $7 a stick. And you might need to try two or three before landing a brand that works for your body chemistry. I suggest asking stores for samples or buying the travel-size so you can test and review.

Either way, replacing your personal-care products with safer alternatives is a worthwhile endeavour.

For nontoxic pit sticks, shop for products without parfum (or fragrance), siloxanes and PEGs. These were the three most commonly found ingredients in deodorants and antiperspirants when the David Suzuki Foundation asked Canadians "Are the Dirty Dozen in your products?"

The concern with PEGs is contamination with 1,4-dioxane. The International Agency for Research on Cancer calls 1,4-dioxane a possible human carcinogen. It's also persistent, which means it doesn't readily break down in the environment. This increases potential for exposure.

Try the online Skin Deep Cosmetics Database, which ranks and rates more than 69,000 products. Or, in 15 minutes, you can make your own Queen of Green Don't Sweat It Deodorant Balm. Into a glass jar, add one tablespoon each of grated beeswax, coconut oil, shea or cocoa butter, and melt it in the microwave. Then, stir in one tablespoon of baking soda and cornstarch. Finally, add five drops of lemon essential oil. Let cool and store in an air-tight container. To apply, add a pea-sized amount under each arm.

Crossley smiles all the way home after golden win

Alexis Crossley has a new prized possession.

The Cole Harbour blueliner won a gold medal at the IIHF world under-18 women's hockey championship in Zlin, Czech Republic, on Saturday, recording a goal and an assist in a 3-0 win over the United States.

"I've been travelling for 20 hours and it has not left my neck," the 17-year-old Crossley said Sunday between flights at Toronto's Pearson International Airport. "I've looked down at it countless times, and no matter how many times I look, I still smile every time I see it."

Crossley, who plays at Shattuck St. Mary's prep school in Minnesota and will suit up at the University of New Hampshire next season, was one of Canada's top performers at the annual tournament, recording two goals and three assists and maintaining a plus-8 rating in five games.

Both of her points on Saturday came in the first period, as she broke the ice at the 9:04 mark and assisted on Sarah Lefort's 2-0 goal five minutes later. It was a tense finish, with the U.S. out-shooting Canada 28-16, but Sidney Roesler's goal with 4:18 remaining relieved the pressure.

"It was then that we were like, 'OK, we've got this,'" Crossley said. "And we just kept pushing from there to prove we really did have it."

Canada's only other gold medal at the five-year-old tournament came in 2010. The U.S. has won the event every other year.

Moose stumble into new year

WUEST
@METRONEWS.CA

They lost to the worst and they lost to the best. No matter how you slice it, 2012 hasn't been kind to the Halifax Mooseheads.

The Mooseheads emerged from a six-day New Year's break in sluggish fashion on the weekend, losing both of their games at the Metro Centre. They fell 5-4 to the last-place P.E.I. Rocket on Friday and followed it up with a 6-3 loss to the first-place Saint John Sea Dogs on Saturday.

"You definitely don't want to start the new year like that," said Mooseheads assistant captain Trey Lewis. "I think it's just details. We've got our full lineup back. The guys think it's going to come easy but that's not the case at all, and we've got to get back to working hard."

The losses couldn't be attributed to one thing, but the Mooseheads allowed goals in the opening 20 seconds of the first and third periods on Friday, including the game-winner, and fell asleep in the second period on Saturday, allowing five goals while mustering just three shots.

Lewis said his team "stood back and watched" the highly skilled Sea Dogs dismantle them in the second period, while Nathan MacKinnon said his team didn't put enough pucks on net. The Mooseheads had 53 shots in two games, including just 11 over the final two periods on Saturday.

"We were just being too cute out there," MacKinnon said following Saturday's game. "We weren't really doing what we had to do. We knew they were a more skilled team than us, and we have to work if we're going to win games, and at times we let up a little bit and it cost us."

The losses caused the Mooseheads to fall one spot in the QMJHL standings to sixth overall with a 24-13-4 record. They're back in action on Thursday at 7 p.m. at home to the Drummondville Voltigeurs.

Donnelly gets AUS win No.1

Former Halifax Mooseheads assistant and associate coach Chris Donnelly won his first game as an Atlantic University Sport men's hockey head coach on Friday, as the last-place Dalhousie Tigers snapped an 11-game losing streak with a 1-0 home win over the St. Thomas Tommies.

Donnelly, whose Tigers also lost 5-1 to Moncton on Saturday, took over the job from Pete Belliveau after the team's miserable first half.

The Saint Mary's Huskies, meanwhile, fell to fourth in the AUS with a 10-7-1 record after losing both of their weekend games.

The London Lightning strengthened their reputation as the team to beat in the National Basketball League of Canada on Saturday.

In a game the Halifax Rainmen saw as an opportunity to shift the league's balance of power, the Lightning finished with a 25-point edge in the second half to recover from a 15-point halftime deficit and earn a 97-87 victory on home court at John Labatt Centre in London, Ont.

It's the Lightning's third win in as many tries against the Rainmen, whose franchise-record nine-game winning streak came to a screeching halt as they fell two-and-a-half games out of top spot.

"We really wanted to win this game just to prove where we were at and what level we were playing," said point guard Taliek Brown. "We just really wanted to win this game. ... But we lost it, so we just have to move on from here, get ready (for our next game), and try to keep winning."

► Rainmen point guard Taliek Brown drives the lane against the London Lightning earlier this season.

The Rainmen are 12-2 against the league's other five teams as they desperately try to get on even footing with the Lightning.

It was Halifax's lowest offensive output of the season, as they missed 13 of 15 three-point attempts in the second half after nailing 8-of-19 before the break. They also missed six of their final eight free throws late in the game, wasting an opportunity for a closer finish.

Jersey foul

The Rainmen's baby-blue road jerseys didn't arrive with the team's flight from Halifax, so they were forced to suit up in the Lightning's black practice uniforms.

"We just let up on offence and defence," said Brown, one of four players in double figures with 12 points. "We came out sluggish, they got the momentum, and we just backed down instead of going forward."

The Rainmen get three more cracks at the Lightning, once on the road on Jan. 19 and again at home on Jan. 27 and Feb. 19. They're back in action on Tuesday on the road against the Moncton Miracles.

"We'll try to win the next time we play them," Brown said. "We have to keep playing hard and keep our heads up."

Huskies steal pair of wins from UPEI

The Saint Mary's Huskies posted an impressive double upset of the previously unbeaten UPEI

Panthers in Atlantic University Sport men's basketball action at The Tower on the weekend.

The Huskies, who had just two wins in seven games at the holiday break, rolled to 93-86 and 91-83 wins over the Panthers to open the new year in impressive fashion. The Panthers entered the weekend 6-0.

The wins leave the Huskies (4-7) tied with the Cape Breton Capers and Dalhousie Tigers for the AUS's final playoff spot.

The Tigers also had a successful weekend, improving to 3-4 by sweeping the Memorial Sea-Hawks in St. John's, N.L.

In women's action, the first-place Huskies swept the Panthers to improve to 8-1, two points ahead of Memorial (6-2).

A turning point for Detroit

► Lions have taken step forward despite loss to Saints, ending playoff drought ► ‘We need to win our division’

The Detroit Lions have taken a leap forward by ending an 11-season playoff drought. They have work to do on defence if they want to make it beyond the first round.

All their deficiencies showed up when the Lions gave up an NFL post-season-record 626 yards to New Orleans in a 45-28 NFC wild-card loss Saturday night.

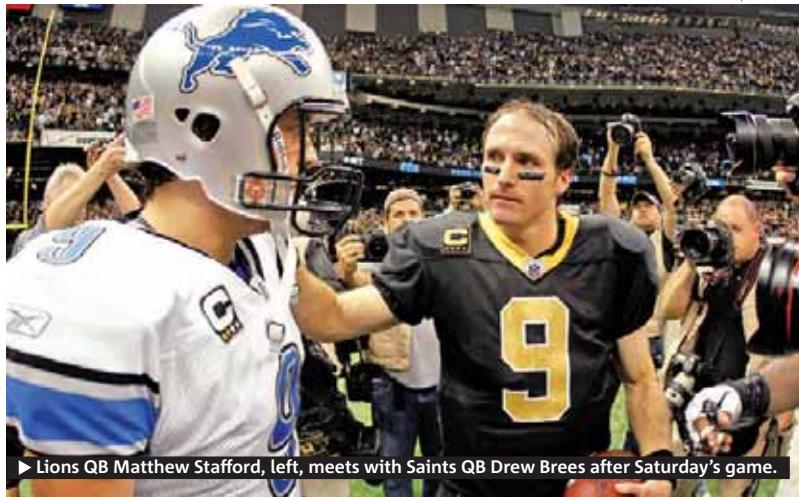

“A loss like this makes us want to return to the playoffs even more,” defensive end Kyle Vanden Bosch said. “It will be no surprise to everyone when the Detroit Lions start to make the playoffs each and every year.”

The Lions, though, will have to figure out a way to improve their roster enough to stop good teams from piling up points and yards. They allowed an average of 122 yards rushing and 312 yards passing in six losses to playoff teams — two times to both Green Bay and New Orleans, and once to San Francisco and Atlanta.

Detroit slipped to the unfavourable matchup against the Saints after losing the regular-season finale by allowing Green Bay’s backup Matt Flynn to throw for 480 yards and six touchdowns.

Instead of beating the Packers, who were without some of their best players, to face the New York Giants and perhaps have a better shot of winning a playoff game for the second time since 1957, the Lions were double-digit underdogs at New Orleans.

“We learned that we need to win our division so the next time we can have a home game and benefit from our home crowd like the Saints did,” quarterback Matthew Stafford said.

Stafford’s goal has a huge obstacle: Green Bay isn’t leaving the NFC North. Detroit coach Jim Schwartz wasn’t in the mood to reflect on the season after it ended in New Orleans, but he’s expected to Monday.

Three seasons after sealing NFL infamy as the only 0-16 team, the Lions have plenty of building blocks to become consistently competitive.

“We’re going to be around for a while,” said kicker Jason Hanson after completing his 20th season with the Lions.

Stafford threw for 5,418 yards with 44 TDs — 18 to Calvin Johnson — and 18 interceptions in 17 games that provided hope for a franchise that has desperately needed it at quarterback.
